Cheerfulness a Great Asset

THE great English author, Thomas Carlyle, says: "Give us, O give us the man who sings at his work. He will do more, he will do it better."

No man can work to good advantage with aching feet. The man who would be cheerful and achieve something worth while, should seek the comfort and satisfaction always found in "INVICTUS" footwear.

To produce the "INVICTUS" no detail of manufacture is considered too small for the most careful attention. That is why you will find every model of "The Best Good Shoes" bearing distinctive marks of style and quality.

The Buckley Guarantee ensures Satisfaction —or a new hat free.

A hat needs a guarantee. More easily than any other article of apparel, a hat can deceive its purchaser—look right, it's right; look left, it's left.

Clothes, or shoes, or ties, you can "size up"—a hat, you can not.

For instance, almost everyone knows enough about tweeds to tell whether a suit will wear well with them.

But when it is a hat, the only way to tell is to wear it.

Or, to tell a hat's real worth without knowing what goes into its making. None can tell exactly but the manufacturer.

He knows better than anyone how long his product will wear—and if he believes in his hat he ought to.

Or, to tell a hat's real worth without knowing what goes into its making. None can tell exactly but the manufacturer.

He knows better than anyone how long his product will wear—and if he believes in his hat he ought to.

Or, to tell a hat's real worth without knowing what goes into its making. None can tell exactly but the manufacturer.

He knows better than anyone how long his product will wear—and if he believes in his hat he ought to.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Glenford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure my rheumatism and never found any medicine to compare with it. I began taking it the day after the attack of the rheumatism, and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully. I have been taking your medicine, and it has also helped other women to whom it was recommended it."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glenford Station, Ontario.

Another Cure

Harvey Bank, N. B.—I can highly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any suffering woman. I have had it for female weakness and painful menstruation and it cured me.—Mrs. DEVEREUX LARROUER.

In your case it is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It has cured many cases of female trouble, inflammation, ulceration, dislocations, forced tumors, irregularities, periods, pain in the bowels, such as bearing down, constipation, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth many to many suffering women.

If you desire special advice write for it to Lydia E. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

No Desire For Food

The Stomach Seems Played Out and the Appetite Flickle

The Digestive System is Overloaded With Poisons—Relief Comes With the Use of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Weak stomach, loss of appetite, indigestion and all the accompanying symptoms of pains, aches, fatigue and weariness, tend to make the springtime anything but joyous for many people.

The system is full of poisons, blood, mucus, the liver and kidneys have been overworked in an effort to remove the waste matter and have failed. This accounts for the backache, constipation, the headache and head-ache.

How is this condition to be overcome? There is no quicker or more certain way than by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. The treatment gets the liver and kidneys in action at once and insures regular movement of the bowels.

The system waste matter which has been clogging the digestive system is removed and the organs of digestion are enabled to properly perform their duties.

After it is clogged, you eat your food with a relish, the stomach is strengthened, the vital organs are strengthened, they require, and waste and energy are reduced.

There is no reason for anyone who knows of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to have any fears about using them. One pill a day, 2c. a box, at all dealers or Edmiston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The Insurgent Lady

A thin hatched-faced woman stood in the rear doorway of the car and refused to move up, although several times I asked to do so by the conductor.

"Move up, madam; move up," the conductor shouted, pushing her ahead.

"I shan't do it," she said. "I shan't move a peg!"

"Move up," insisted the conductor; "there's plenty of room in the middle of the car."

"I shan't do it," said the woman, clutching her strap.

Just then a man ran across the platform in front of the car and the conductor put on the brakes hard.

The car stopped suddenly. The woman was pulled from her strap and sent skittering down the front end, hitting the floor against the various surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 7c per bottle.

From that position she shouted:

"Well, I'm here; but you didn't make me come!"

Charity

Two beautifully dressed women got on the car at a quiet street and entered into a discussion of their household cares and worries. Finally, when the subject of jellies was reached, one said to the other:

"I have tried some gran apples this year, but the stuff wouldn't jell, and we had to give it to the Salvation Army."

AND DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
CURED THE POSTMASTER

Tippins had suffered for years and spent hundreds on doctors and medicines, but found the real cure at last.

Tippins, P. O. Box 1 (Special).—The Kidney Pills have cured me and thousands friend anywhere than Mr. E. Tippins, postmaster here, we would like to hear from him. And Mr. Tippins is always ready to tell others of his praises the great Kidney Remedy.

"After recovering from an attack of Grippe," the postmaster says, "I took Dr. Dodd's Kidney Pills and I feel much better now. I have had grippe nearly three years and it kept growing worse all the time. I was attended by all the doctors around but got no relief. I had to get a job to keep up my strength. After spending about $200 on doctors and medicines I gave up all hope."

"I am now in full health, my wife to go and get me a box of Dr. Dodd's Kidney Pill and that would be the last medicine I would try. After using about half the box I feel much better. I am going to take them again. When I had taken two boxes I was able to get ten and ten boxes cured me completely."

Reasonable Doubt

The teacher had called upon Freddie to give him a good illustration of the proper manner in which to compare the adjective "clean."

"Mother is clean," said he, falteringly, "father is—cleaner." Here he stopped.

"And?" prompted the teacher.

Freddie was still silent and very thoughtful.

"Hasn't you some other relative?" asked the teacher, smiling.

"Oh, yes," replied Freddie, "there's auntie—but I isn't sure about her!"

Backwoods Luxury

A Boston sport happened to miss his train and stopped at a farmhouse in the backwoods of Maine. The following morning he asked the farmer how he had got there.

"Well," said the farmer, "you had supper, then you went down cellar and drank pretty near all my cider, and when you were done, you didn't say so much as 'thank you.' You then kissed my wife, and ye had a bed and her breakfast this morning. Do you think ten cents is too much?"

Careless Talk

Doctor—How do you—ever use strong language?

John (genuinely)—Well, Sir, I—1 may be a little keeरless in my speech at times.

"Ah, I'm sorry, John. But we will converse about that some other time. Just now I want you to go to the plumber's and settle this bill for $10.00 for throwing out a water meter."

"Any time you wish to the man in a careless sort of way, as if it were your own bill."

"Yes, I had ten children. They all grew up and married off."

"I suppose it is lonesome now, at home?"

"No. Every once in a while one of them gets a divorce and wanders back."

After a few seconds' thought he replied:

"All right. Send me a post."

THE ONLY MEDICINE
FOR THE BABY

The only medicine a mother should give her little ones is one she can give and feel absolutely safe that not the slightest harm will result—a medicine that is guaranteed strictly from natural ingredients, a medicine for Baby's Own Tablets—every box is sold under such a guarantee and the mother may feel perfectly safe in giving them to even the most delicate of her little ones.

Mrs. Albert E. Wood, London, Ont., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets all that is claimed for them. My baby has been ill for months and will take them eagerly. I am sure there is no better medicine for little ones."

The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Well, Then?

After hearing about the new fad for babies, "What is it?"

"They're going to have pockets in their stockings."

"That's a good one. Won't be funny to see all the ladies walking down the main street with their hands in their pockets?"

As far as the representative of the Pioneer has been able to learn the ratepayers seem about evenly divided as to the advisability of installing all of the systems that the Council put before them at the ratepayers meeting last week. There seems to be no doubt but that a by-law for a municipally owned electric light plant would pass, but there seems to be a feeling amongst a number of ratepayers that a waterworks and a sewage system would be too costly for a town like Didsbury.

As far as the electric light is concerned it is practically a necessity now. The danger of accidents through the dark winter nights is very great, and who of us like to think of our women folk who have to go out on winter nights walking these dark streets. If by any means an accident should happen the town will be held responsible, and the damages that might be awarded would perhaps more than cover the interest on an investment of this kind for some years. Then again, what must be the impression that is given to strangers coming here or passing through to see a town the size of Didsbury in such total darkness. There are several other reasons why we should have electric light, but no doubt the ratepayers will think of these themselves. As was explained at the meeting after the first year of operation the plant would be practically self-sustaining, if not revenue producing, and that should go along way towards taking away any fear of a very great increase in taxation.

The waterworks and sewage question is a more complicated one. No doubt a waterworks system would work out to a great advantage to the town even if the ratepayers did not install it in their homes. The saving in insurance alone would make quite a difference, and the fact that we had a better system of fire fighting than at present would give greater confidence to newcomers to build and improve property than at present. If the ratepayers did not want to have it installed in their homes they would not be forced to take it, in fact they would not be compelled to have it on their street unless a majority of them signed a petition for the same, consequently the mains would only be laid on those streets where the hydrants would be installed for fire purposes, and the increase in taxation would be nil for the benefits obtained by having this fire protection. The revenue from waterworks would likely be a very small sum.

Sewage disposal is a hard matter to consider. The cost of installing the necessary adjuncts in a house would be quite an item outside of the extra taxation for installing the main lines. Of course quite a lot of ratepayers think that putting waterworks and sewers in at the same time would lower the cost considerably to the whole town. This might be so, but what would be the use of this unless a majority of the property owners would install it in their

CHAPTER XV.

Felix Zary.

It would have been a comparatively easy matter for the two friends to have slipped out of the house before the crippled came down the stairs, as he was not in the room. But Charles Evans, the front door was still open and there was no one to bar the way. Then it suddenly occurred to Vennier that he might they would be secret the secret of the puzzle panel which communicated with the house next door.

"It would never do to go away like this," said Vennier. "Besides, it is more likely that we shall want to use that entrance again. We shall have to run the risk of losing sight of the crippled, and he is better than having to let the panel open for the want of a key in the morning."

Vennier could see for himself at once that there was no help for it so without further discussion, the matinée the two men hurried down the stairs and then darted through the hole into the house next door. It was only the work of a moment to replace the panel, but hardly had they done so before they heard a confused murmur of voices on the other side. Gordon pressed his back to the panel until the noise had died away.

"It was a pretty close call," he said. "Give me the mouldings and I will try to make them secure without any unnecessary noise. I dare say we can get the right of the puzzle panel. Anyway there must be no hammering, or we shall be pretty sure to rouse the suspicions of the people next door."

It was, perhaps, fortunate that the mouldings fitted so well, for Gordon managed to work the nails into the original holes and complete a more or less haphazard fit.

"That's a good job well done," Vennier said.

"Yes, what do you do it for? In fact, what are you two gentlemen doing here at all?"

The voice came with a startling suddenness. It was an exceedingly sharp, melodic voice, and it was steadily ring to it. The two friends wheeled round sharply to find themselves face to face with an exceedingly tall, thin, and gaunt-looking man whose face was like a mask. The amazing thinness of his figure. In that respect he was not at all unlike the types of human skeletons which one sees in a travelling circus or some show of that kind. The man, moreover, was dressed in deep black, which added to his sombreness. He had an exceedingly long, matted, and wavy hair, which hung a mass of oily-looking black hair; his nose, too, was long and thin, and a long, drooping mouth, his mouth, was thin, and while his appearance was redeemed from the grotesque by an extraordinary pair of black eyes, which were round and large as those of a Persian cat. Despite his extreme thinness, he conveyed a certain suggestion of strength. At that moment he had a handkerchief between his fingers, and Gordon could see that his fingers were so thin that, if they had been made of India rubber, Gordon had heard that sort of hands before described as "cupper's hands." And when he had expected to see the handkerchief appear and an orange or something of that nature take its place. Then the strange, coolly, pale, and thin face seemed to be perfectly at home and conveyed a curious impression to the visitors that he expected to find them.

"I beg to remind you that you have not yet answered my question," he said. "What are you doing here?"

"Let me answer your question with another," Vennier said. "Who are you and what may you be doing here?"

The man smiled in a peculiar fashion. His big black eyes seemed to radiate a light which was intense and full of a vivid fire, though, at the same time, the long, here-like face never for a moment lost its look of profound dejection. There might have been a graver meaning behind a dull painted mask.

"We will come to that presently," he said. "For the present the mention of my name must content you. It is just possible that you have heard the name of Felix Zary."

Vennier and Gordon fairly started. The name of Felix Zary was familiar to them, but only during the last three-quarters of an hour. In fact, that was the name of the man as to whom whereabouts Fenwick had been so anxious. There was another element in the name which, up to this moment, had not advanced very far towards solution.

"I have heard the name before," Vennier said, "but only quite recently within the last hour or so." Then, I suppose, we got interested over a game of cards, and one way and another, know exactly what you mean. You probably heard it next door when you were listening so intently to the conversation between Mr. Vennier and Le Fenwick the cripple, and that scoundrel who calls himself Fenwick. He is exceedingly anxious to know who I am, and what I am, and the secret intention of bestowing me. And for long, his curiosity will be gratified, but not in the way he thinks."

The latter words came from his mouth with a spittle on his lips, as though he was a cat out in the presence of a dog. The great round black eyes added intensity to the threat and the belief in the secret intention of bestowing me. The physician bowed for Fenwick when at length he and Felix Zary came face to face.

"The latter words are quite right," the strange man went on. "And as to you gentlemen, I have asked your names merely as a matter of courtesy. As a matter of fact, I know perfectly well who you are. I am the friend of Mr. Vennier and Mr. James Gordon. But there is one thing I don't know, and that is why you have thrust yourselves into this diabolical business."

"You must be a fool or absolutely unconscious of the terrible danger you are running. If either of you are friend of Fenwick—"

"I am not friend of Fenwick," Vennier retorted. "You pay us a poor compliment indeed if you take me to be in any way friendly with that scoundrel."

"And yet you are here," Zary went on. "You are trying on the one hand to possess myself of my friend, Le Fenwick. You have contrived to obtain possession of the keys of my house for no purpose whatever. Why?"

Vennier paused before he answered the question. He did not recognize the right of this man to put him through such an examination, but he was anxious to know the less he said the better. Perhaps Zary saw something of what was going on in his mind, for his big black eyes smiled, though his rejected visage was as pale as a ghost.

"I see you do not trust me," he said.

"Perhaps you are right to be suspicious. Let me ask you another question, assuming you are the same time that I am the friend of Charles Evans and his sisters, and that if necessary I will bring them down to see you in your trouble."

"You are," Vennier was irresistibly drawn to his lips; it refused to be kept back.

"Beautiful," he said slowly, "because it is my wife."

A great sigh of relief came from Zary.

"I am glad of that," he said. "Extremely glad. And yet I had one more question to ask you. Do you know me? Do you know me to be the friend of your friends, and that you two are only actuated by the best motives. For the last day or two I have had you here, to be kept back."

"Beautiful," he said slowly, "because it is my wife."

A great sigh of relief came from Zary.

"I am glad of that," he said. "Extremely glad. And yet I had one more question to ask you. Do you know me to be the friend of your friends, and that you two are only actuated by the best motives. For the last day or two I have had you here, to be kept back."

"How long would it take eight men, working ten hours a day to build a house 50 feet high, if they built an inch an hour?"

For hours Alexander pondered over this perplexing question. Every time he tried to find an answer, his desperation, he took it to his father.

"Wot?" roared the father, as he read the question. "Do you mean ten hours a day to build a house 50 feet high?"

"It's outrageous! It's abominable! Don't you do it me lad. I'll write you a letter and I can take it down ter your teacher."

Well satisfied, Alexander laid his task aside. And in the morning the teacher was presented with the following little epistle:

"Sir—I refuse to let me son do the sum you gave him last nite, as it looks to me to be a sum on the eight hours a day to build a house 50 feet high."

"Did ye want to see me?" she demanded in threatening tones.

The peddler rapped timidly at the kitchen door at the home of Cliff Martin a few days ago. Mrs. Kelly, Martin's hired girl, angry at being interrupted in her work, shouting from the door and glowering at him.

"What can you want, madam?" she asked, as she came down the disappointment in my face.

Hastening I named a sum less than half the price she demanded, "and the condition the gown is yours," she said.

"And what is that?" I asked breathlessly.

"I have a father who is bedridden," she said. "Never was there a greater lover of music. Only last night he was fretting because he might never hear the last little Sembrich, of whom I have told you. I have a sum less than your debut here. Come and sing an aria for him and the gown is yours at your own price."

Gentlemen.—In January last Dennis Lester, one of the men employed by me, working in the lumber woods, had a tree fall on him, crushing him fearfully. He was not found, and died on a hill. I have been told that his fears were entertained for his recovery, his hips being badly bruised and his body turned black from his ribs to his feet. We have Minard's LINIMENT on him freely to deaden the pain and with the use of three bottles he was completely cured and able to return to his work.
